MOST HOLY BODY AND BLOOD OF CHRIST
(CORPUS CHRISTI)

When people in biblical times entered into an agreement, they didn't draw up a contract and sign it because most of them did not know how to read or write. Instead, they sealed the agreement by going through a little ceremony. That's exactly what happens in today's first reading.

In that reading, Moses stands at the foot of the mountain and, after reading the conditions of the agreement, he takes the blood of young bulls and sprinkles some of it on the altar and the rest on the people. As he does this, he says the blood is that of the covenant God is making with the Jewish people. In this way, Moses and the people ratify the covenant or contract that they enter into with the Lord. In this contract, they promise to obey the commandments and the Lord promises he will take care of them because they are his special people.

Although the ceremonies used to ratify an agreement differed from time to time and from place to place, there was one thing they had in common. Blood was always an important part of these ceremonies because ancient people believed blood was the source of life. They used the blood of animals as a symbolic way of saying that the agreement was coming to life. The shedding of blood made the agreement official.

In today's Gospel reading, Jesus takes the cup of wine and says it is his blood, the blood of the covenant. Jesus used his own blood to give life to a new covenant between his followers and his Father in heaven. Jesus' blood made our covenant with God official.

Notice that all three of today's readings contain the word "covenant." The dictionary defines this word as "a contract or agreement." Although this isn't an incorrect definition, it really isn't an adequate one either.

A covenant is a contract or agreement in which the parties who are entering into the agreement share their lives with each other. A covenant involves a relationship, a very close relationship built on love. It was Jesus' blood that made such a close and loving relationship between God and us a reality.

FOR REFLECTION-

God wants to share his life with us but he will not force himself into our lives. Take time today to invite God into your life. Ask him to teach you how to love as he loves.

Experience is what you get when you didn't get what you wanted. (Italian proverb)

Dedicate some of your life to others. Your dedication will not be a sacrifice. It will be an exhilarating experience, because it is an intense effort toward a meaningful end. (Dr. Tom Dooley, missionary and physician)

There is nothing so strong as gentleness nor nothing so gentle as real strength. (St. Francis DeSales)

A good prayer, though often used, is still fresh and fair in the eyes and ears of heaven. (Thomas Fuller, author)
